

LIFE

SUMMER ISLAND

The shocking truth behind this remote community

FESTIVAL OF THE SEA GOD

Read the photo essay that shook the World

Summer Island #1, August 2022. Published by Campfire Entertainment LLC, Suite C2 561 4th St, Brooklyn NY 11215. Summer Island™ © 2022 Steve Coulson. All inquiries: scoulson@campfirenyc.com. Names, characters, places, and incidents featured in this story are fictitious. Any resemblance to persons living or dead is coincidental. This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial 4.0 International License. <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc/4.0/> Dedicated to Pamela Coulson (1935-2022).

In 1954, The United States Navy detonated a dry-fuel nuclear device on Bikini Atoll in the Marshall Islands.

But scientists miscalculated the yield. The resulting explosion was 1,000 times more powerful than both Hiroshima & Nagasaki.

Soon after, the Monsters arose.

They began to lay siege to cities on both the Atlantic and Pacific seaboard.

Millions perished.

The cities responded by investing heavily in advanced defense systems using military-grade technology.

Smaller coastal communities, however, were left to fend for themselves...

SUMMMER ISLAND

A black and white illustration of a rocky island. The foreground shows dark, jagged rock formations. In the middle ground, a small settlement with several buildings is built on a rocky outcrop. The water is light-colored, and several boats are visible, including a larger vessel with a mast and a smaller boat. The sky is filled with large, dark, textured clouds.

STORY BY STEVE COULSON

ART BY MIDJOURNEY

It's 1973. I'm working as a freelance photographer for Life Magazine.

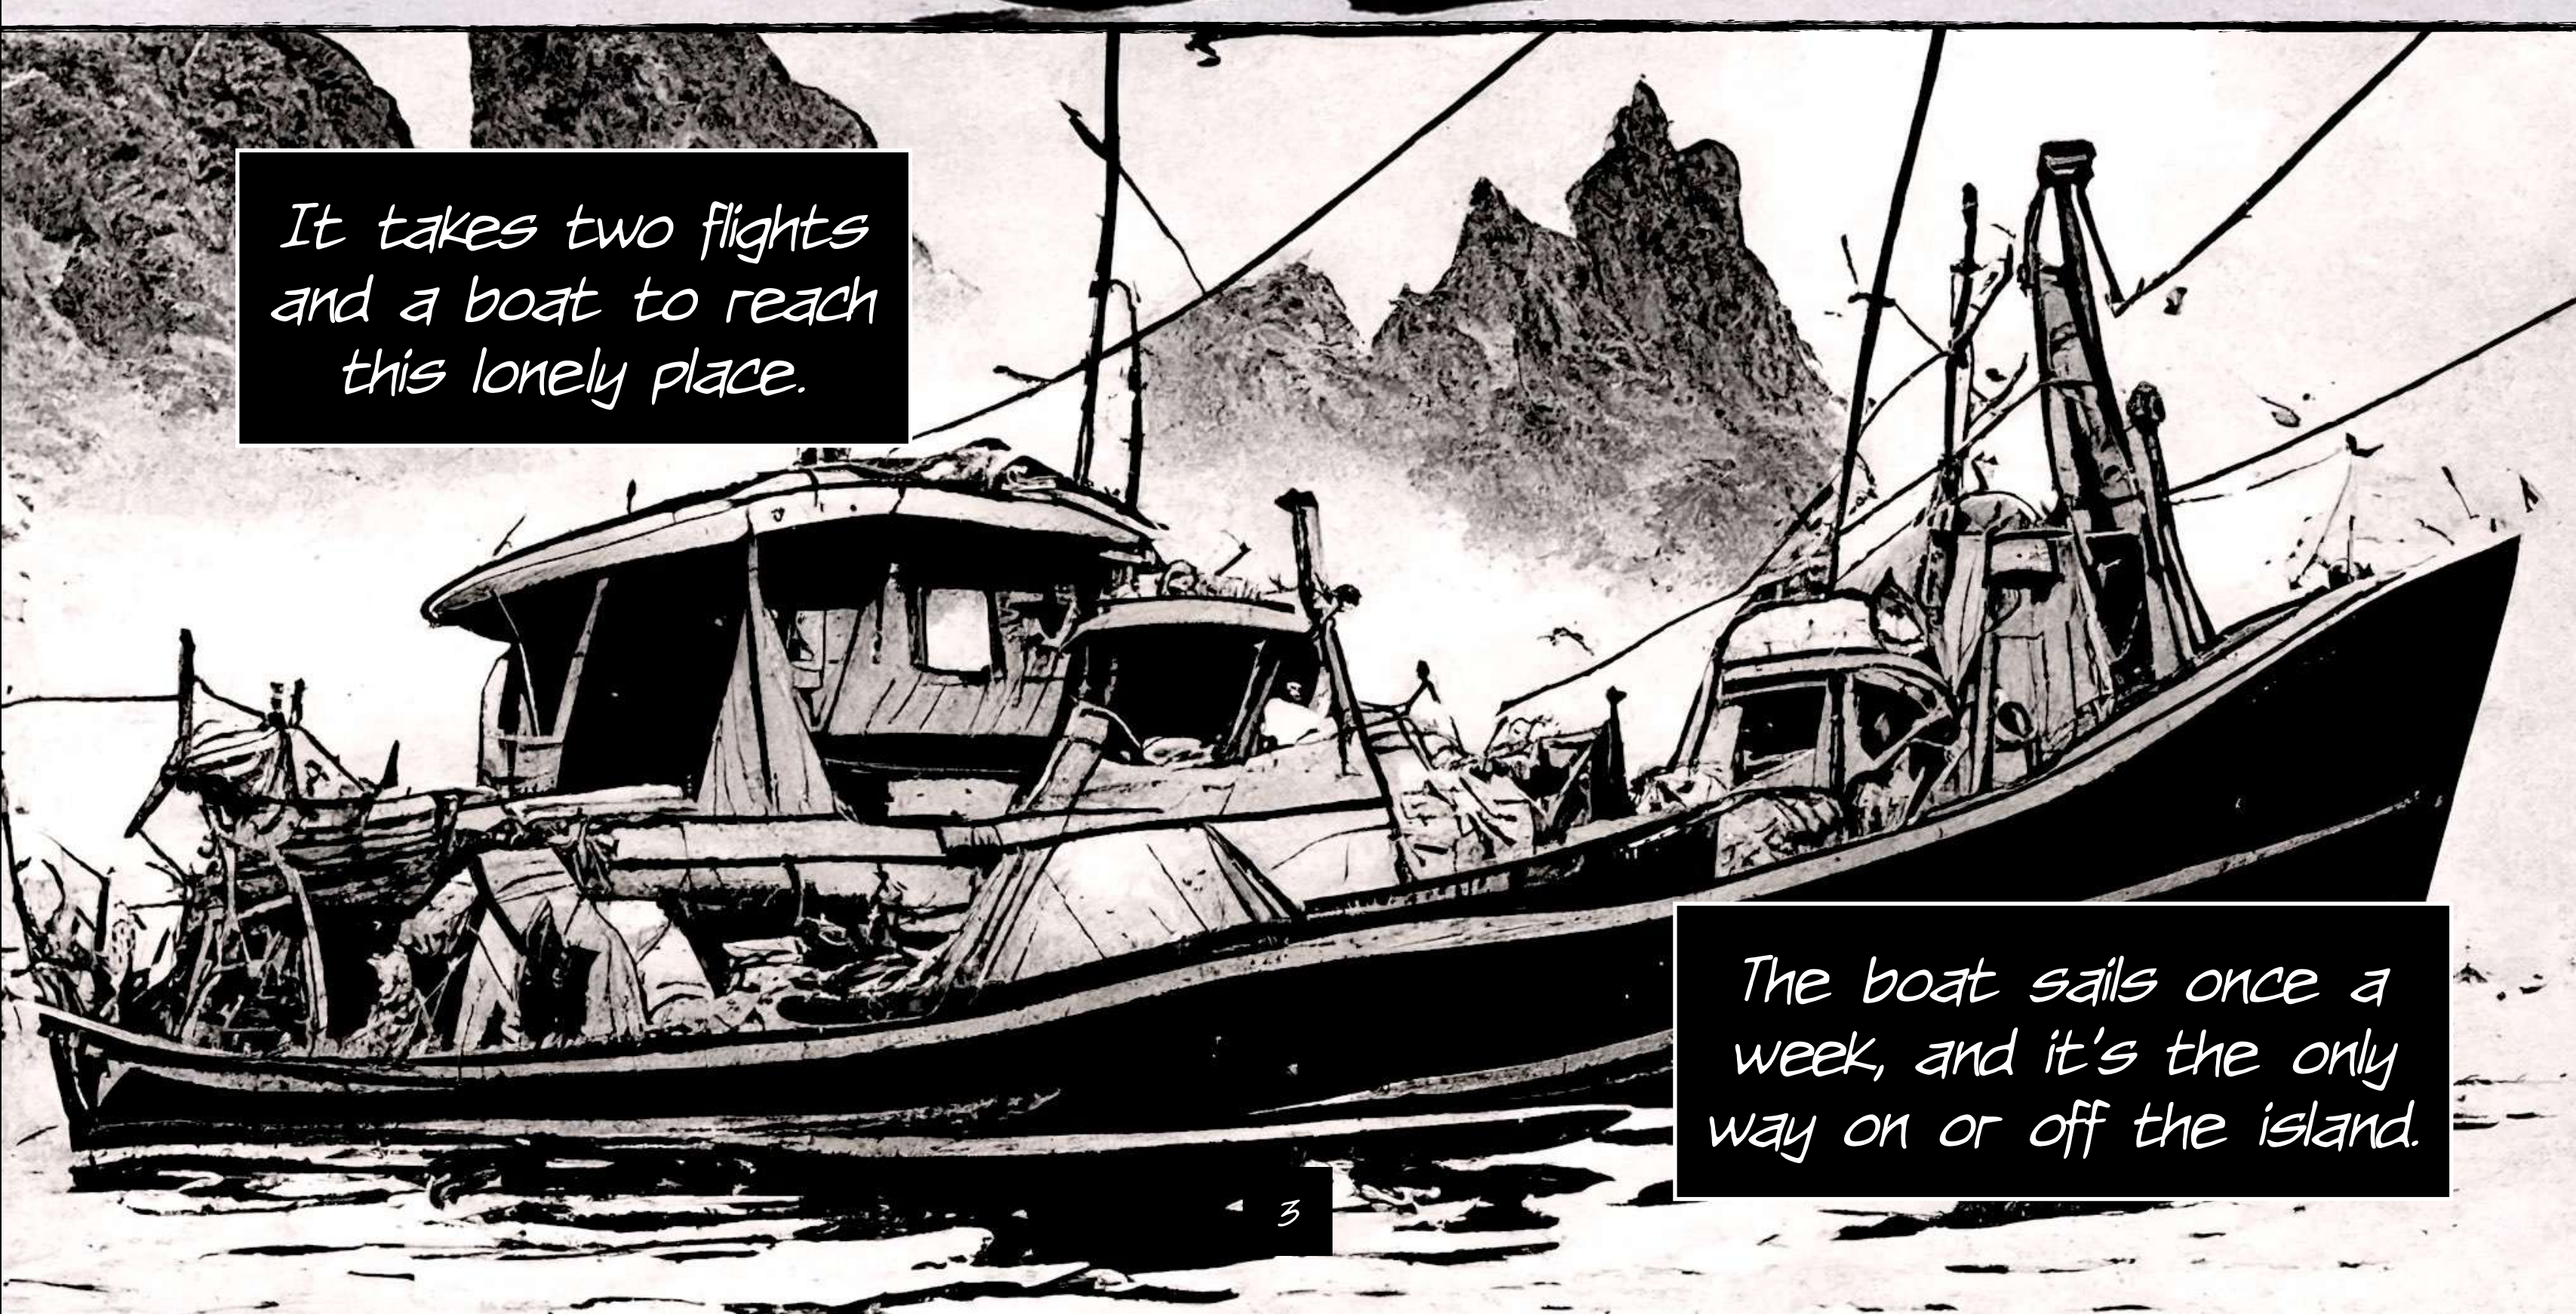

I've been invited to Summer Island, a remote, isolated community in the Outer Hebrides.

The fishermen here trawl for Arctic Char in the frigid waters of the North.

It takes two flights and a boat to reach this lonely place.

The boat sails once a week, and it's the only way on or off the island.

Electricity first arrived here ten years ago.

A sign on the lone telephone reads "For Emergencies Only".

Nine o'clock in the morning, and it's unnerving to find the place deserted.

*As I'm walking, I'm shooting.
It's force of habit, born out of years on location.*

Something's not right.

So when IT finally appears, I'm ready. Because it's true what they say - the camera never lies.

*And here, in this place, The Gods
walk among us.*

A silent finger points the way.

In the distance, I see villagers walking.

I follow.

*The further I go, the more
I find signs of celebration.*

*Or perhaps worship.
It's hard to be sure.*

Along the way, the crowd grows - a procession with purpose. We're definitely headed somewhere.

I grew up in a small English village a lot like this one. Every year a traveling fair would arrive and set up in the High Street. Bumper cars, candy floss, shooting galleries.

They called it "Feast Week" although to be honest, I have no idea why.

When "The Feast" came, the whole village participated. On opening night, I remember we'd all walk through the streets towards it, as one.

I haven't thought about that in years.

But this feels the same.

Finally we turn a corner and their "Feast" is revealed..

Welcome to The Festival of the Sea God.

As good as I am at what I do, I already know that these photographs will never truly capture the intensity of what I'm experiencing.

Smoke from small bonfires fills the air, along with the scent of incense and spring flowers.

Then there's the song and laughter of children at play.

And the costumes - spectacular - home-made, primal, channeling visions of dream and nightmare.

And - of course...

...the monsters.

They're a friendly lot, and more than happy to pose for a portrait and shake my hand.

To be honest, I'm starting to feel like the guest of honor.

I'm snapping like a maniac, exposing roll after roll of Tri-X, fascinated by this community, whose ancestors long ago made these remote islands their home.

*They're a people seemingly with their own made-up religion.
But then, who am I to judge?*

After all, aren't all religions made up? A reflection of our collective experience? A shared understanding of the world, created by ancient priests in an attempt to impose order on the primordial chaos?

Certainly the Monsters could be seen as Gods walking the Earth, in all their destructive wonder. So why shouldn't these simple people be allowed to worship them from afar without scorn?

And then, in this moment, I see her...

...The Bride of the Sea God!

But not just one Bride.

*In an open field next to the Festival, I start to see more and more.
A dozen at least.*

*All dressed alike, all with the same Blonde locks.
Twins? Sisters? Cousins?*

And, in stark contrast to the revelry of the crowd, all have the same air of resigned melancholy.

The Brides are kept isolated from the crowds, behind a rope barrier.

And then, they rise, as if triggered by some unseen command or event, and start to make their way out of the village.

I once photographed a bullfight in Portugal. Unlike those Spanish heathens, the Portuguese let the bull survive, and get it out of the ring by herding in cows, which the bull blindly follows.

And it's like that now, as we all head out of the village.

Summer Island has only a few hundred residents, but there must be over a thousand here.

Where did all these people come from? Did they all make the pilgrimage here just for this festival?

Why? What's the draw?

What's the main attraction?

Oh. Oh God.

It's constructed of branches and reeds and must stand 100 feet tall.

And the congregation stands before it in silence.

There's a quiet reverence in the air. A sense of anticipation.

Like they're all waiting for something to happen.

And then it hits me.

THUD!

Literally....

The first thing I notice is the smell.

Earth, damp straw,
tree sap. And...
something else...

...something acrid.

My hands and feet are tied.

Oh God, they've put me in the belly of that Beast.
Those fucking lunatics!

I just... I just need to get free... and get to that damn phone box.

"Hello? Help!
Somebody! HELP!"

"HELP ME!"
PLEASE!!!"

"IS ANYBODY OUT THERE...?"

FUCK, NOW I KNOW what it is...

...that smell...

...creosote...

...petrol...

...and smoke!

Oh Jesus

Jesus Christ!

=koff=

oh god

*"Our Father... ≡koff≡ ...Who art in heaven... ≡koff≡... ≡koff≡
...hallowed be Thy name..."*

"Thy Kingdom come...☸☸"

To this day, Summer Island has never been attacked by giant sea monsters.

I've loved comics - and been an avid reader - since I was five. Now I'm 57.

So it's taken me half a century to get around to creating my own comic story. And they say you can't teach an old dog new tricks!

The problem has always been - I can't draw, which is a bit of setback in a visual medium. And I had no friendly artistic collaborator who trusted me enough to take on a project like this (wisely).

But now there's MidJourney, one of the new crop of Artificial Intelligence image generators. All the illustrations in this story were created by MidJourney, based on written prompts I supplied, and while I've tweaked a few things here and there in Photoshop, what you see here is basically what you get (if you ask it nicely.)

The story itself started life as a photographic exploration, using MidJourney to create an essay in the style of the 1973 movie, The Wicker Man (which you can also see in the following pages).

After I'd finished the essay, I wondered - could I use MidJourney to tell the same story in a completely different visual and narrative style?

SUMMER ISLAND is the result.

Do I think MidJourney will replace the comic artists I grew to love over the years? No, of course not. Those geniuses have an eye for dramatic composition and dynamic narrative that I strongly doubt machine learning will ever be able to match.

But as a visualization tool for non-artists like myself, it's a hell of a lot of fun. And when MidJourney spit out some of these panels, I found myself doing a double-take at the quality it could already produce. And as a good friend of mine used to say "And Steve - this is the WORST it will ever be!"

I hope you enjoyed your visit to SUMMER ISLAND. It's just one small corner of a world grappling with a monster problem. So perhaps we'll return one day. Meanwhile, I'd love to hear what you think. - SC

Email: scoulson@campfirenyc.com

KODAK 5017 EPR 9 KODAK 5017 EPR 10 KODAK 5017 EPR 11

8A 9 9A 10 10A 11

8A

KODAK 5017 EPR

9

9

9A

KODAK 5017 EPR

10

10

10A

KODAK 5017 EPR

11

11

8A

KODAK 5017 EPR

9

9

9A

KODAK 5017 EPR

10

10

10A

KODAK 5017 EPR

11

11

8A

KODAK 5017 EPR

9

9

9A

KODAK 5017 EPR

10

10

10A

KODAK 5017 EPR

11

11

8A

KODAK 5017 EPR

9

9

9A

KODAK 5017 EPR

10

10

10A

KODAK 5017 EPR

11

11

8A

KODAK 5017 EPR

9

9

9A

KODAK 5017 EPR

10

10

10A

KODAK 5017 EPR

11

11

8A

KODAK 5017 EPR

9

9

9A

KODAK 5017 EPR

10

10

10A

KODAK 5017 EPR

11

11

8A

KODAK 5017 EPR

9

9

9A

KODAK 5017 EPR

10

10

10A

KODAK 5017 EPR

11

11

8A

KODAK 5017 EPR

9

9

9A

KODAK 5017 EPR

10

10

10A

KODAK 5017 EPR

11

11

STORY & ART
© STEVE COULSON 2022

scoulson@campfirenyc.com

*And here, in this place, The Gods
walk among us.*